JAN 20TH MEETING—3RD TUESDAY IN-PERSON

In-person only on the third Tuesday, January 20th. We are still working to figure out how and when we can work in on-line meetings. It's by far worth the extra effort to come in-person, but we recognize not everyone can.

*"If ever there is a tomorrow when we're not together –
there is something you must remember.
You are braver than you believe,
stronger than you seem,
and smarter than you think.
But, the most important thing is,
even if we're apart...
I'll always be with you."*

~ Winnie-the-pooh, A.A. Milne

MESSAGE

*When the child you have cherished is taken,
when the light of that promise is gone,
when the faith which sustained you is shaken,
and your days stumble painfully on...*

*When the sorrows of loss are unending and your God seems forever away, find the message your lost one keeps sending:
words of loving and thanking and mending...
let your child shape the peace of your day.*

~ Sascha Wagner

Our Wish for 2026

We wish everyone a year of more loving remembrance, a year of finding gentler days and more peace...more than you ever thought possible.

Great Expectations.....not!!

"She didn't call."

"I never heard from them again."

"I know they think I'm fine."

"They never mention his name."

"All they talk about are their grandchildren. They're so insensitive."

During the earliest days of our grief, the people closest to us are usually there for us. They call, they write, they commiserate...if we're lucky. Then we begin to notice less and less attention as some decide they've done all that can be expected of them...and they and others begin to expect that we who are bereaved should begin to show signs of healing...which to them would mean becoming once again who we were.

So a great conundrum is in the making. We expect the world around us to be sympathetic and understanding of our limits and continue to extend an empathetic sensibility and accept who we are becoming. The world around us, on the other hand, expects that with time, we will show signs of healing and a return to the selves we used to be.

Neither of these things will happen. At least not in any

THE COMPASSIONATE FRIENDS MEETINGS are now monthly - in person on the third Tuesday of the month

WE MEET AT 7:00pm—arrive or sign on at 6:45pm

Jan. 20 and Feb. 17, 2026, we will be meeting only in person at the

Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church

55th Street and Fifth Ave (enter at 7 West 55th St.)

The Compassionate Friends is a mutual assistance self-help organization offering friendship and understanding to bereaved parents, grandparents and siblings. We are a group seeking support in our grief or are able to give it. Among us your religion, your race, your politics, your job or social standing are not important. We care about your grief—the tragedy that each of us have shared—and how we can grow through it, not back to the person we were, but to the person we can become.

Winter of our Souls

by Sasha Goodman

It is winter today. There is no sun, not even a flash of light to focus on. The air has become murky as if it has solidified, losing its clarity. Ice covers everything, smothering any life that might have been.

Staring out my window, I compare the bite of winter to my grief: the coldness, the shadows, and my reluctance to breathe in any more discomfort. Grief, like winter, appears uninvited and unwelcome. We abhor the pain and wonder why we must endure the distress, while all along we feel the imminent arrival.

Winter compels the earth to rest. Everything stops struggling, stops performing, and sleeps. Abruptly, nature's need to "do" is gone and "being" is all that is necessary. All that was living before appears lifeless. The leaves disappear from the trees, flowers no longer grace our gardens, and the grass is entombed by snow. But what is going on beneath that which we see? Are the flowers really gone, or are they only changing . . . becoming new, becoming different?

I ponder how much further I dare go with this. Can I contend that grief, like winter, is a gift? Can I talk about the metamorphosis of grief, and contemplate gratitude for its presence? I do not know, but that is where my thoughts are leading me.

Grief necessitates a sabbatical from living. We stop struggling, stop performing, and freeze. Our compulsion to "do" dissolves, and "being" is all that is possible. Our life as we knew it disappears, dreams are shattered, and our hearts are ripped from us in the blink of an eye. We are gone, lost in our grief. But what is transpiring in our heart? Is everything gone, or is it only changing . . . becoming new, becoming different?

Grief is harsher than winter. The tasks of daily living are amplified, and what was once soft and blurred becomes sharp and ragged. While winter invariably ends and I remember that spring will arrive, grief makes no such promise. I must wait without assurance. There are moments when winter is beautiful: a blanket of fresh snow on Christmas morning or the surprise of a warm breeze in February. There are nights when winter is hard and ugly, when temperatures plummet and the howl of the wind threatens our sanity. Grief is the same. A special memory comes into my heart and grief becomes bittersweet . . . beautiful. Then, a letter addressed to my son arrives in the mail, and I am back to the harsh reality that he is gone.

My grief transformed me. It tore out everything within me and said There! It is GONE! What are you going to do?

You have NOTHING LEFT TO HANG ON TO! You must begin again. You must change.

And change is what I did. As winter alters the earth, my grief changed me. It gave me a period of time to step back from living and just be, a space in my existence to feel only that which I needed to feel. It was a time for reflection, reprioritizing, and searching. Without it, I would remain as empty as a garden that never rests.

"But it was painful, horrifying, and devastating," you say. "How can you be thankful for such a thing?"

Grief, like winter, freezes our world. Both appear painful, horrifying, and devastating, but it is our preparation for, reaction to, and perception of that creates our discomfort. It is our need to judge which labels discomfort as bad. If we deny that death is possible for those we love, we will be stunned and terrified by its occurrence. If we react to the first blizzard of winter with panic and fear, we will be too afraid to honor its power. If we perceive a fatal ice storm as an act of God, we will shake our fist at Him and spend more time than we have asking why. And if we distinguish death as the end of a loved one's existence, we will be eternally saddened by their absence. The path to spring, to the end of winter, requires only our patience and perseverance. The path to healing requires that and more: it requires that we learn to think differently.

We are a society that fears death. We consider it an end to life, love, and all that came before. Those who die either cease to be, or they exist in a place that is unavailable to us. It is not surprising that fear is present. However, if we alter our beliefs, we can then change our preparation for, reaction to, and perception of death. If we come to know that death is a change in form and not an end, we will not eliminate the winters of our grieving, but we will lessen our suffering.

When my son died in 1996, I had no other option but to change my thinking. I could not live another day presuming he no longer existed. By saying to myself often I am changing my perception of death, I announced to the universe and my higher self that I intended to change what I believed. I placed my intent, reached for it, and settled for nothing less.

I began searching for and finding information to support my new perception. I read books about life after death, mediumship, after death communication, spirituality, and reincarnation. I perused websites, subscribed to email lists, and joined chats where these topics were addressed. I found like-minded friends who understood what I was feeling. I observed mediumship activities on television, at seminars, and on the Internet. I began to support my new belief system with knowledge.

I invited experiences by talking to Jason and asking him to come to me in a dream or to give me a sign of his presence. I meditated and made myself more aware of that which isn't seen or touched. I opened up a doorway of possibility and welcomed all that came from love to enter.

Finally, I accepted what happened and expressed gratitude. When the lights went off and then on again for no apparent reason, I was quick to say "thank you." If I was only thanking the power company, it didn't matter. No one knew. The more I accepted as real, the more I experienced. We hear often that "seeing is believing," but this is about "believing is seeing."

My journey has been both desolate and inspiring. There have been moments when I thought the cold and darkness would never end, and moments when tears of joy washed away the pain and light permeated my being. I invite you to walk the path of grief a little differently: to nurture winter's bleakness and look deep into its purpose. And just as we must think differently to see winter's grace, we must think differently to see the gift of grief. It is there, buried beneath a frozen crust that protects and restores while the winter of our soul . . . ensues.

SIBLING GRIEF

I was a sophomore in high school when my little brother, Arthur, was killed. As a sad coincidence, the woman who killed him was the secretary in my school. I must have seen her at school the day he was killed, but I am not able to consciously remember it. I can't remember seeing Arthur lying in the street either, though I know I did. All I can recall is being horrified and needing to get away from there. I took my younger brother home and never saw Arthur again. It was the dreadful beginning of a very long and painful journey.

The pain of grief is unavoidable; so is the family disruption. What can be changed however, is the length of the grieving process. Unfortunately for our family, we were given no help, and we stayed a mess for a very long time. I would like to share some of my experiences in the hope that it will help you to cope with your brother or sister's death.

The first thing I can remember is not knowing how to act or what to do. I felt terribly alone and awkward. I was shocked. One minute was a nice normal day and the next everything was changed. I didn't know how I was supposed to act at school. Part of me wanted to tell everybody what had happened and part of me didn't want to talk to anyone at all. I felt guilty for getting some comfort from the attention. (I asked myself if this meant I was "glad" that my brother had died.) But on the other hand, I felt as if people would think I didn't care when I said nothing. It hurt either way. One way I dealt with my grief was by being sarcastic and laughing whenever something painful came up. I laughed outside but I think my friends knew I was crying inside. Most people don't know how to help us, but hopefully you will have someone you can talk to. If not, perhaps you will be able to talk about how you feel at home.

Home becomes a pain-filled place. Our parents have been hurt very, very badly. They aren't the parents we knew before. The biggest mistake I made in my grief was trying to "fix" my parents' pain. I wished for and acted in ways that I hoped would change them back to happy, whole people again. I know now that it was not my responsibility to do this. In fact, I couldn't do it. No matter how "good" I was, or how much I tried to make our home pleasant, they were still sad. The bad thing was, by trying to make them better, I stuffed a lot of my own sadness, tears and worries inside. This added more problems to my grief. In some ways it felt better to worry about them instead of myself but as I got older those painful old memories wouldn't stay covered up anymore. It is like a splinter that gets covered up with skin and feels better until the infection sets in; then it hurts so much more when it comes out. We have to take care of ourselves, and trust our parents to take care of themselves.

For years I rarely cried about my brother. I always thought something was strange about that. It was years before I was able to let the tears flow. Then I cried for him and for me. I cried for Arthur because he was dead and I cried for myself because of all I had missed. I missed feeling happiness in myself and my family. I missed feeling safe and secure. I missed the attention my parents were no longer able to give me. I missed the years of carefree childhood that were ripped away. These are all losses that we grieve for besides the loss of our brother or sister.

The Compassionate Friends Sibling Credo

*We are the surviving siblings of The Compassionate Friends
We are brought together by the deaths of our brothers and sisters*

Open your hearts to us, but have patience with us.

Sometimes we need our families to be there.

*Sometimes we must walk alone, taking our memories with us,
to become the individuals we want to be.*

We cannot be our dead brother or sister; however a special part of them lives on with us.

When our brothers and sisters died, our lives changed.

We are living a life very different from what we envisioned and we feel a responsibility to be strong even when we feel weak.

Yet we can go on because we understand better than many the value of family and the precious gift of life.

Our goal is not to be the forgotten mourners that we are, but to walk together to face tomorrow as the surviving siblings of The Compassionate Friends.

The Things I Didn't Say

If I could sit and talk to you for just a little while,
I'd say the things I wish I'd said,
like...how I love your smile.

How much I loved the sight of you,
your voice, your eyes, your face...
to watch you playing basketball
and see you win a race.

You were so much a part of me,
the part that's gone away.
These memories you left become more precious every day.

I pray that you can hear this,
and God will let you see the pride, the joy, the happiness that your life gave to me.

~ Pam Fennel, TCF, Delmar, NY

It hurts. Yes, it does. Cry about it. Laugh about it. Write about it. Pray about it. Just don't try to bury it. It won't work in the long run. And you know...I can do all those things today and it doesn't hurt nearly as much as it did when I started.

Another thing I now realize is that my feelings about my brother's death were not the same as my parents'. I used to think I didn't love my brother because I wasn't sad as long as they were. They hated the holidays, but I wanted the fun they brought. They couldn't be happy. I could, especially after the first terrible set of holidays. Our parents have the right to be sad because that's how they are feeling. We have the right to be happy if that's how we are feeling. Each one of my brothers and sisters had their own feelings. Each was sad, happy, regretful in their own way and time. We grieved with separate timetables. Sometimes we shared feelings, and many times they were different. None of us, however badly we felt, came close to having the depth of pain my parents did. I didn't understand that then as I do now. This is an important thing to know so we don't feel guilty about getting on with our lives.

Another thing I remember is that I used to think about things I did or did not do with my brother before he died. I felt guilty because I didn't play with him the last time he wanted me to. Of course I didn't know he was going to die. I remember times when I got mad at him and yelled at him for no good reason. I felt guilt about that too. I can now realize what I did or didn't do had nothing to do with his death. It is easy to take on guilt, so we have to be careful not to. One of my brothers has always felt guilt because it was his bicycle Arthur was riding when he was killed. My brother did not kill Arthur. The woman who was driving her car did. It is important not to blame ourselves. Even if we did have a part in the death (or think we did), we must forgive ourselves. Certainly we didn't deliberately do it.

One last thing that has stayed with me is a fear of dying and of death. After Arthur was killed, I suddenly noticed that death was predictable period of time. Disappointment can be defined as the result of missed expectations. And what greater disappointment is there than the loss of a child and the expected future we had hoped for but lost. Coming to terms with that disappointment may take a lifetime and though it may always be with us, along the way we continue to experience life in all its varying forms but always seen through the prism of loss. How we experience the world after such loss changes us, but those around us are not changed. The stage is then set for more and more disappointment as our expectations and those of our extended family and friends become more and more misaligned.

Looking back at my own experience, I can't remember what it felt like to be bereaved at five years or at ten, at seven years or at twelve years. I vividly remember what it felt like to be bereaved that first and second year...maybe even the third year. But all the other years in my memory feel the same. Like it does today. I long for my son. I miss him every minute, every day of my life. So much happens that I wish I could share with him. So much of what might have been his life continues to occupy my thoughts. The love continues. And so does the disappointment.

I guess what has changed are my expectations. And along with those, my disappointments have changed as well. I no longer expect people to acknowledge Peter's special days - his birthday and the anniversary of his leaving. I no longer expect people to acknowledge that I am forever bereaved. I recognize that most people think I am "over it" and it no longer bothers me. (Well, maybe a little.) My friends' lives continue and change as they watch their own children grow and expand their lives. I only grow older. Nothing eventful or memorable or hopeful inhabits my days.

My own family has almost disappeared from my life. And that is okay I suppose. I am not forever exposed to their joy and happiness and am not required to comment or participate in their lives. In a funny way, that's made it easier for me. My total disappointment in them and the way they abandoned me during my darkest days made it easy for me to distance myself from them. They can't disappoint me anymore.

There is an upside to what would seem to be pretty sad. Truth is I lead a very full life, a life filled with great friendships, a magnificent garden, and travel unencumbered by family requirements. It's a life redesigned by circumstance. I miss my son desperately, but I enjoy the lives of those I've chosen to be close to me. Life's greatest disappointment has made me impervious to all the others.

~ Marie Levine, 2010

real. A friend from school died, a cousin died, and two of my pets died. Even now it is almost like I expect people to die around me. Whenever I travel, I ask when I get back, "is everybody okay?" Fortunately, there have been many times I expected death and it didn't happen, but the fear is still there. I frequently remind myself that and that helps. I also try to use the awareness of death's reality to value others in my life right now.

My brother's death definitely changed my life. It brought pain and unhappiness, but it also brought awareness of other people's pain and the ability to understand and help others. I hope you can take something from my experience and use it in your grief - and maybe you can pass it on someday, too.

The Compassionate Friends Credo

We need not walk alone.

We are The Compassionate Friends.

We reach out to each other with love, with understanding, and with hope.

Our children have died at all ages and from many different causes, but our love for our children unites us.

Your pain becomes my pain just as your hope becomes my hope.

We come together from all walks of life, from many different circumstances.

We are a unique family because we represent many races and creeds.

We are young and we are old.

Some of us are far along in our grief, but others still feel a grief so fresh, and so intensely painful that we feel helpless and see no hope.

Some of us have found our faith to be a source of strength; some of us are struggling to find answers.

Some of us are angry, filled with guilt or deep depression; others radiate an inner peace.

It is pain we will share just as we share the love for our children.

We are all seeking and struggling to build a future for ourselves, but we are committed to building a future together as we reach out to each other in love, and share the pain as well as the joy, share the anger as well as the peace,

share the faith as well as the doubts,

and help each other to grieve, as well as to grow.

WE NEED NOT WALK ALONE.

WE ARE THE COMPASSIONATE FRIENDS.

Live Chats

The Compassionate Friends offers "virtual chapters" through an Online Support Community (live chats). This program was established to encourage connecting and sharing among parents, grandparents, and siblings (over the age of 18) grieving the death of a child. The rooms supply support, encouragement, and friendship. The friendly atmosphere encourages conversation among friends; friends who understand the emotions you're experiencing. There are general bereavement sessions as well as more specific sessions.

Our Children Remembrances — Changes

A longstanding tradition in our Manhattan Chapter of Compassionate Friends newsletter has been the listing of our children's and sibling's birthdays and anniversaries. I know I look first at each issue of the newsletter to see my child's listing, my sister's listing, and scan for the birthdays and anniversaries of my TCF friends' loved ones.

It is very important that our listings are correct and meaningful and we try to keep the listings as accurate and up to date as possible, but we are not perfect. Should you desire a change to your loved one's listing or if your listing is missing, please let us know. Email to tcfmanhattan.nyc@gmail.com and tell us what needs to change.

Our Children Remembrances — Changes

A longstanding tradition in our Manhattan Chapter of Compassionate Friends newsletter has been the listing of our children's and sibling's birthdays and anniversaries. I know I look first at each issue of the newsletter to see my child's listing, my sister's listing, and scan for the birthdays and anniversaries of my TCF friends' loved ones.

It is very important that our listings are correct and meaningful and we try to keep the listings as accurate and up to date as possible, but we are not perfect. Should you desire a change to your loved one's listing or if your listing is missing, please let us know. Email to tcfmanhattan.nyc@gmail.com and tell us what needs to change.

Gifts of Love

A Love Gift is a donation given in memory of a child who has died, or sometimes a memorial to a relative or friend. It can be in honor of a happy event that you would like to acknowledge, or simply a gift from someone who wants to help in the work of our chapter.

All TCF chapters are totally dependent on funds from our families. We DO NOT receive funds from our National Office. Everything we need to operate our local chapters is paid directly from our local resources and our local family contributions. Thank you to all who can contribute and support this chapter. Please see 'Making a Contribution' below:

Passing the Basket – We raise needed funds at each meeting by passing a basket for voluntary contributions at our in-person meetings. We are so glad to hold online meetings whenever possible, but there is no 'basket' at our online meetings. If you are able to, whenever you can as an online participant, please help and make a 'Basket' contribution to help our organization.

Making a contribution –

Easiest way – online – use a credit card securely with Paypal – Click this link: Please donate here

Or you may mail a check to The Compassionate Friends, c/o Sally Petrick, 945 West End Ave Apt 2B, New York, NY 10025. Please make your check payable to The Compassionate Friends – Manhattan Chapter. We need and appreciate your support.
